Four Deaths Due To High Winds and Rain

As the mercury dropped, residents of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware today checked on widespread damage caused by a 50-mile gale which brought four deaths.

High winds, accompanied by rain, unroofed homes, barns and garages and blew down power lines over a wide area. A 30-degree drop in temperature changed rain to sleet and snow, glazing highways with dangerous ice films.

The windstorm's greatest fury centered around Easton, smashing frame structures, uprooting trees and blowing off roofs. Eastern sections of Lancaster county were also hard hit. An estimated 250 chickens were killed on the farm of Norman Kramer in the northeastern part of the county.

The dead:
Paul W. Foster, 38, of Mahanoy City, killed in an automobile accident; Lanzio David, 54, New Brunswick, N. J., who fell from his roof; Joseph Botts, Bordentown, N. J., drowned when his small boat capsized while fishing in the Delaware near Trenton; and Ross Weaver, 57, Lancaster, pedestrian, struck by a car in blinding rain.

By Cecil B. Brown

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

ROME, Feb. 16—(INS)—Thousands of foreign Jews in Italy are today busily liquidating their holdings preparatory to their expulsion to an unknown destination next March 12.

Their native co-religionists, some descended from families who fought with Caesar's legions, looked with fear on violent Nazi anti-semitism at the northern terminus of the Rome-Berlin axis.

This question hovers on the lips of 80,000 Italian Jews in Italy who today are hemmed and hedged by Fascist decrees in their economic, political and academic life.

Some 15,000 Jews who came to Italy since 1919 as post-war refugees must leave the country. Outside of trial—

Urges Business To Aid

Harrisburg, Feb. 16—The advent of the Republican administration of Governor Arthur H. James was hailed today by W. C. Arthur, president of the Pennsylvania Chamber of Commerce, as removing business from the political "doghouse."

Arthur, addressing the 22nd annual Chamber of Commerce convention here, appealed to employers from all sections of the Commonwealth to adopt a three-point program aimed at:

1. Solution of the relief problem.
2. Revamping of State tax laws.
3. Preventing migration of industries from Pennsylvania.

"We regret that Pennsylvania's State Chamber of Commerce," Arthur declared, "as an organization representing Pennsylvania business, did not enjoy any effective place in the councils of the late administration (headed by former Governor George H. Earle)."

"We have an open invitation of the new administration to make our voice heard, and that without commitment other than the resolution on the part of the new Governor, to be fair to all the interests of this State."

Arthur proposed "an effective brake upon relief expenditures" could be applied through the "participation of local governments in the administration and cost of relief." A new source of local taxation, he added, was not necessary.

Arthur proposed realignment of present taxes and the taxing of new revenue as a means of balancing the State budget.

Police Are Confused

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 16—Police moved in confused circles today in their search for the will-o'-the-wisp bandit gang that vanished after taking about $200,000 worth of cash and jewels from the swanky Blackstone Hotel vaults early yesterday.

Investigators said the five robbers had apparently planned their get-away with the same care they used in looting the strong boxes. It was most certain, they said, that the bandits had some inside knowledge of the setup, and the lists of former employees were scanned.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Copyright, 1938, by The Baltimore Sun)

The Murphy "Program"

Washington, Feb. 15.
FOR a while it looked as if the extraordinary portrait drawn of the new Attorney General as a saint in politics was merely the work of over-zealous friends and too partial relatives, and not the sort of thing a man of moderate modesty would acquiesce in about himself—particularly as the tendency is to make him slightly ridiculous.

Continuation of fervent publicity along these lines, however, rather bolsters the view that, so far from being averse to this picture of a great man who lives upon a plane too high for ordinary mortals to reach, Mr. Murphy likes that notion of himself. At any rate, recent pronouncements emanating from his department lend substance to the idea. Clearly inspired stories represent him as having a passion for purity such as no other who ever held his high office possessed. He proposes not only to speed up the courts but to clean them up. Wherever "unhealthy conditions" exist he will cure them. Not only the Federal judges will be purified but the Federal district attorneys as well. The intimation from anonymous "aides" of Mr. Murphy is that there are plenty of other Mantons on the Federal bench, but there will be none left after the Murphy crusade is over.

In addition, he proposes to sweep out all the low political jobholders who now clutter up the Department of Justice and for whom Mr. Murphy's none-too-pure predecessors were responsible. And, finally, in the future, it is said, neither Federal judges nor Federal attorneys are to be named for political reasons. The whole level of the Federal courts is to be raised. No

BLAZE THREATENS FOUR MILL ST. STRUCTURES

Firemen, By Efficient Work, Check Spread of Flames Into The Adjoining Properties

ESTIMATE LOSS AT $1200

Sparks from a hot wood fire lodging in a defective flue are held responsible for the blaze which yesterday afternoon threatened a group of four buildings, 130, 132, 134 and 136 Mill street. The fire, it is said had been burning nearly 10 minutes before discovery. Dense smoke rolled over the section of Mill street when the firemen were called at 12:25.

In a second inspection of the premises after the blaze had been quenched, Chief Clifford Hagerman gave the above reason for the fire and estimated the damage at about $1200. The properties are owned by the Bristol Trust Co.

Chief Hagerman says there was a wood fire in a pot-bellied stove on the second floor of 132 Mill street. The sparks from this fire worked their way up a defective flue in through the ceiling which was also the floor of an air chamber extending over the four properties built in a row.

The flames were confined to the building in which they originated with the exception of a small portion of the property 134 Mill street, where the blaze burned through into the rear. The flames did not get into the building occupied as a laundry but there was some damage done by water.

When the firemen arrived they immediately realized that the blaze was in a location where it was going to be difficult to fight. The second floor of the building 132 was choked with smoke. Chief Hagerman would not permit the tin roof to be cut, because of the high wind at the time and of the ventilation which would be given the flames, which would speed up their spread.

All apparatus responded and was placed at strategic points because of the congested area. Five hose lines were placed in service and firemen fought the flames from the back and front of the buildings.

One fireman, Edward Cummings, was injured. He was treated at Harrisman Hospital for laceration of a finger.

The firemen did very efficient work in stopping the spread of the flames which at the start had all the appearance of going to be a big fire. The four buildings were all attached and with the air chamber above there was an excellent opportunity for their spreading into all four of the structures. This the firemen prevented.

A large crowd of spectators stood in the rain watching the firemen.

Those present: Mary and Rose Ellen McValine, Lois Black, Nora McGee, Patricia Waters, Mary Ann Barton, Charles Utz, Joseph Commare, Russell Johnson, Kenneth Hibbs, Charles Foltz, James DeVoe.

"Rescues" His Collars

By "The Stroller"
Despite the tragic appearance of the early stages of the fire on Mill street, yesterday afternoon, there was a bit of comedy injected when Mulford Callanan, manager of the State Liquor Store, was seen running from the Chinese laundry stuffing his linen collars into his pocket.

"Well, I got them," smilingly remarked the well-known first warder, as he safely reached the opposite side of the street. Then he pulled the collars from his pocket, counted them and said "O. K."

WILL ERECT AN ADDITION TO 1ST BAPTIST CHURCH

To Occupy Space Between Edifice and The Parsonage

TO FILL S. S. NEEDS

Ground To Be Broken Soon; Will Also Improve The Parsonage

An addition is to be built to the First Baptist Church edifice at Cedar and Walnut streets, the main object of the new section being to care for needs of the Sunday School.

For a number of years the Sunday School has recognized the need for more room to properly conduct its work and larger quarters have been long under consideration. The new addition to be built on Cedar street will fill a part of that need.

The building will occupy the space between the rear of the church and the house, joining the church and parsonage together. The building will be built with the idea in mind that some time a new parsonage will be built on Walnut street, and the present parsonage equipped for Sunday School work, to be used as class rooms for the adult department.

Ground will be broken in the near future for the Cedar street addition which will be a two story structure. The first floor will be used by the primary department of the Sunday School, and the second floor will be used by the choir.

The exterior walls will be built of brown stone faced blocks to harmonize with the present church building; the interior walls will be white sand finish. Maple flooring will be used throughout the building. All other woodwork will harmonize with the present building.

The choir platform will be moved to the opposite side of the church auditorium and the organ console will also be moved to a new location. Pews will be placed in the space now used by the choir platform.

At present it is necessary for the choir members to assemble in the rear of the auditorium and at the beginning of the service to walk up the aisle of the church to their places. With the completion of the new addition, the choir will assemble in the choir room of the new building which will be accessible by a stairway from the first floor. The choir room will lead directly to the new choir loft in the auditorium.

The new building is to be erected in memory of Martha P. Swain and a bronze plaque with suitable inscription will be erected in the Sunday School room.

The parsonage will be covered completely with dark red brick shingles. This work is already in progress.

All organizations are giving their fullest co-operation. The Social Circle has pledged $1000; the Sunday School has pledged $500; the Players Guild, the newly organized dramatic society, has pledged $100. Mrs. Vandegriff's Bible Class has turned over $50 and other groups are planning special gifts.

This was followed by a "Question Bee" which was arranged by the committeewoman, Mrs. Adelaide Ross, and it proved very interesting. The questions were political, geographical and historical. First prize went to Edward Filemeyer, of Somerton Highlands, Feasterville, who answered every question correctly and scored 500 points, and second prize was awarded to Miss Mary O'Reilly, of Churchville, who finished with 468 2/3 per cent.

A social time followed and refreshments were served. The next meeting of the Association will be on Monday evening, March 6, at which time an interesting entertainment will be presented, the first of its type ever to be given by the club. Those interested in Republicanism are cordially invited to attend the March meeting.

FEAR AND SUSPICION

The music hall comedians of Berlin who are sent to a work camp for kidding the Nazi regime are victims of a world and time without a sense of humor. Their predicament differs only in degree from that of their brothers elsewhere. In its current issue, "Variety" reports a dilemma now faced by NBC and other American broadcasters which bears in this general direction.

"An extreme sensitivity taking on the aspect of a public neurosis has put the network (NBC) on such an edge," says Variety, "that it must bar from variety programs every subject that might prove controversial." Even dialect comedians are heatedly resented by the races whose dialects are used, and this despite the fact that the comedian is of the same race. Such a comic on the Vallee hour was cancelled this month when a script had been so mutilated as to be worthless, in deference to fears of cries of racial propaganda and libel. The same script a year ago would have been approved as a matter of routine. And the experience of radio is that of any medium exposed to the pressure of public opinion and minority sentiment.

It is not enough that the world be urged to forget this unprofitable quickness to take offense where none is meant. It should, of course; and we can yearn for a time when skins are not so thin and the guileless humorist can add to the day's gaiety at no peril to himself. That day is not to return, however, while the present masters of much of the earth still see advantages for themselves in fanning hatred and keeping bitterness alive. For unfortunately these things are infectious, and the ignorant and weak-minded and emotional everywhere have no immunity to them.

Life is real and life is earnest, but not as grim as it looks to the psychopaths in power, who have cast a spell of darkness and distrust over none of the great comic weeklies of the world. It was to be expected that Germany now survives to amuse not only Germany but civilized people everywhere. But that none survives here is a circumstance that bids us think. We appear to live in a world that is in deadly fear of laughter particularly at itself.

POWER OF SUGGESTION

This has been characterized as the age of tolerance. Tolerance implies an open mind, the absence of blind bigotry, possession of the power to reason, and a willingness to hear both sides to every question before forming one's own conclusions. It follows, therefore, that modern society, being more tolerant of the opinions and manners of others, should be more open to suggestion. It is probably a fact that the great mass of Americans was never before more subject to suggestion.

Everybody has heard of the power of suggestion and everybody has seen it demonstrated through the medium of political reform, advertising and slang, catchphrases. A spacious slogan can win acclaim for a creed or cause previously universally rejected and obviously fallacious. Then the catch phrase there is no more effective camouflage for the purious.

Suggestion plays a most important part in business. Advertising, show windows and show cases owe their origin and usefulness to the power of suggestion. Contrary to a popular impression, the merchant advertises and displays his wares to create a desire for possession.

the first floor of the Palmer Apartments to the Mc-Cahan property, corner Maple avenue and the old Lincoln Highway. Dr. Robert O. Blitz, of the Research Department of Wistar Institute, has rented the apartment vacated by Mr. Murphy.

Mrs. Cake and daughter Helen, Germantown, were visiting friends here on Monday.

Alton Ridge, Bridgetown, killed a blacksnake on his premises on Monday. The reptile, which measured seven feet, was found coiled in the dog kennel.

Three-Alarm Fire

Denver, Colo., Feb. 16 — A three alarm fire broke out early today in the Mine Exchange Building, large Denver office structure.

The fire started in the upper floors, where the first alarm was turned in, and spread rapidly to lower floors. Snow, lashed by a sharp wind, hampered fire fighters.

Furpignan, France, Feb. 16 — General Franco's insurgent forces are rapidly preparing for a major attack upon government housed central Spain, according to reports today.

The insurgents are expected to resume large scale hostilities in the Madrid-Valencia area in view of the decision of Premier Juan Negrin and his cabinet to keep on fighting.

more judges are to be named in the way, for example, that Representative Goldsborough, of Maryland, and Attorney General Forster, of Louisiana, were named. On the contrary, from now on all judicial appointments are to be made on merit, as for example, that of Mr. Francis Biddle, in Pennsylvania, whom Senator Guffey did not endorse, and Mr. Patterson, of New York, whom Senator Wagner did not endorse, though both are concededly good men.

IN brief, the present Attorney General is floundering determined to bring not only his immediate department but the whole Federal judiciary machinery up to his own personal standards, which are, we are told, so high as to be meticulous. He is so constituted, his friends assert, that he cannot tolerate patiently even for a moment the suspicion of tampering with the judicial setup and would regard any such attempt as almost inconceivably wicked. No man in public life, it is held, has ever so cherished the integrity and independence of the courts of country, high and low.

THIS, of course, is splendid stuff and it is a pity to find a man in his important position imbued with such lofty ideals and so nobly determined to frustrate the scheming politicians whose slimy touch has so often tainted American justice. No one would want to discourage so sublime an effort nor disparage so high-minded a man even if he harbors only half of the great purposes ascribed to him, it would be a great gain for the public service, because there is no department of the Government which in the past has been more thoroughly saturated with politics than the one over which Mr. Murphy now presides. And it is, unfortunately, true that not a few Federal judges, as well as Federal attorneys, have been named for ignoble political reasons.

sons. There is no better evidence of this than the Roosevelt appointments of the past five years.

THE three most recent are the exception, not the rule. It will be fine if the Murphy influence succeeds in making these the rule and the other kind the exception. Nevertheless, the whole business would be more impressive if it were not for certain things. One is that there has been altogether too much personal publicity about the Attorney General's program to avoid some skepticism as to results. It seems to be more than a little overadvertised. A second is the difficulty in reconciling his ardent advocacy of Mr. Roosevelt's 1937 effort to pack the Supreme Court with his present highly publicized devotion to the integrity and independence of all courts.

FRIENDS of Mr. Murphy explain this on the ground that his admiration of Mr. Roosevelt is such that he thinks anything that gentleman proposes is right, and certainly would have been against the packing proposal if anyone else had made it. While that perhaps is a tribute to his loyalty, it does not say much for his personal judgment or independence. There is the further fact that Mr. Murphy is not likely to be Attorney General for more than two years and that is far too little time to do the big things he has scheduled. However, it won't hurt to try, and most persons will wish him luck if he really does. It would be a little more encouraging, however, if, good though he may be, he were not made out such a "lion of virtue," and if, as one friendly commentator wrote, "his pious way of saying things did not sometimes make the equally righteous confess to a touch of nausea."

So we're celebrating in a big way. Tons of fine foods await you. Every price marked down to such low levels you'll be inclined to question your own eyes. This value event will crowd our markets to capacity. Don't miss it. We're giving the greatest bargains at our command. Come!

ON THE SCREENS

RITZ THEATRE, CROYDON
To be a screen veteran when one has just turned nineteen is something of a paradox even in Hollywood, where paradoxes are the rule rather than the exception. But Mary Hart, the lovely ingenue who plays opposite Roy Rogers in Republic's "Come On, Rangers," now at the Ritz Theatre, has been on the stage since her fifth birthday.

She made her professional debut with her brother John in a kiddie dance team. The combine lasted eleven years, which is a record even for old-timers!

Deluxe rides in the "automobile of tomorrow" are taken by Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paulette Goddard, Roland Young, Billie Burke and Richard Carlson in David O. Selznick's production, "The Young in Heart," which is playing at the Ritz Theatre.

BRISTOL

The merry romantic adventures of a madcap heiress who runs out on her fortune and into a roving reporter who's out to get her story but comes back with her heart, are gaily depicted in Hal Roach's "There Goes My Heart," in which Fredric March and Virginia Bruce romp into the Bristol Theatre today.

A great cast, headed by the new streamlined Patsy Kelly, Alan Mowbray, Nancy Carroll, Eugene Pallette and Etienne Girardot, supports the stars in this comedy romance of a girl who threw away a million dollars, deserted her yacht for a bargain basement, and found that you can have a barrel of fun eating hamburgers.

riding subways—and falling in love—with a guy to whom you'd always been just a headline—and a headache.

"The Dawn Patrol," Warner's new aviation story, has its first local showing today at the Grand Theatre. A full-bodied action drama—it marks the return of Errol Flynn to the adventurous type of role which made him famous.

"The Dawn Patrol" is a story of British wartime aviation, a moving and exciting compound of the pitiful, heedless gallantry of youth and the calmer courage of maturity. It relates the typical history of a squadron of the British Royal Flying Corps during a few fateful months of 1915—a period when the average life of combat pilots over the western front was only four-and-one-half flying hours. It was a time when raw and hastily trained recruits were, in a constant, deadly chain, sent forth to almost certain death as soon as they reported for service.

Enrollment of Loyal Republicans Over 1600

"The Earle administration set the cause of good government in Pennsylvania back ten years. Governor James is no parlor-magic politician. He pulls no white rabbits out of high silk hats.

"But he does believe in honesty, and economy, and hard work, and a chance for industry, and is devoted to the immortal principles of government for which Lincoln stood and for the preservation of which he died. I beg of you be patient with him, support him in the work you elected him to do, for he is setting an example for the whole country—an example that will loom large in 1940 when it comes to doing in the nation as a whole what the Republicans of Pennsylvania so well began last year.

"Governor James, harassed by fiscal problems inherited from an administration that left Pennsylvania on the brink of bankruptcy, and intensely occupied with a program of corrective legislation, merits the sympathetic consideration of all good citizens.

"Patience should be the keynote of Republican leadership.

"That's hard to ask of county leaders besieged by faithful workers—and some not so faithful—to whom personal contact with the State payroll seems the most important public problem.

"It is all the more difficult to ask because some of these county leaders find themselves asked to take positions in factional squabbles that may do more to encourage fresh outbreaks of factionism than to produce the harmony that all profess to be seeking.

"Those who have been fortunate enough to contact Governor James personally find him firm, but kindly disposed and of an understanding mind. They have come away with the belief that he means to do the right thing, but that to his way of thinking, and very properly so, the problems of patronage must be secondary to the problems of State.

"Given time, these think he will get around to as reasonable an approach to patronage as is possible under the circumstances.

"There is no quarrel with the natural desire to reward those who went out on a limb for James last year. Indeed, that the Governor should reward these is generally conceded.

"But practical politicians do not believe this very laudable purpose should be carried to the point where it may cause disastrous county fights next Fall that might very well be reflected in a split delegation going from Pennsylvania to the Republican national convention in 1940.

"The Democratic leadership faced an opportunity—and a hazard—four years ago very similar to those faced by the James Administration today.

"Its defeat last Fall was due in a very considerable measure as much to the destructive influence of factional strife as to public disgust with the type of government it offered.

"A united Republican party next year would sweep Pennsylvania. A party torn by dissension might find itself seriously threatened.

"The need of the Sixties was for Lincoln. The need of the nation in 1940 will be for another Lincoln. Perhaps such a one is now in the making.

"The Republicans of the United States want a man not only willing to swear to uphold the Constitution, but who knows how to keep that oath. They want a man who understands that that America we have inherited was made by saving and work, and not by waste and extravagance. They want a true-blue American, without a splash of pink or red on his political apron.

"And have no doubt about it, the Republican Party will find such a one. Always when Pennsylvania has needed ed a man, as it needed one last year, one has been forthcoming. Always when America needed a man, as it needed Lincoln, and as it needs another like him now, he has been forthcoming."

Harrison Gift and Elmer Egert served as stewards Monday and served the refreshments. Greetings were extended by Assemblyman Thomas B. Stockham, Morrisville. Plans were announced for an indoor carnival to be held at the next meeting, March 13, at the club house.

Jews in Italy Busy Liquidating Holdings balloon talk, no plans are known to have been made to create a Jewish homeland in Ethiopia.

Under the banner of "defending the Italian race," new restrictive measures have been passed or put into effect almost daily since the "pure Aryanism" drive legally started two months ago.

Since Fascist treatment of the Jews is following closely the program created by Hitler, informed observers here see the imminence of further measures designed to remove every Hebrew influence on the life of the nation. These measures will be expressed in the statutory reform now under way.

Scores of Jewish merchant houses already have passed into Fascist hands, and there has been a house-cleaning of Jewish employees in most others. The speed with which the elimination program has progressed leads observers to believe that the Nazi objectives in the Jewish problem may be attained in Italy even sooner than Hitler reached it.

Mussolini's leniency is heralded by Fascist authorities as being especially represented in the list of exceptions from restrictions. These are families which have contributed to the Fascist cause, held membership in the party before 1924, fought for Italy in her four wars, or won Fascist appreciation by other means.

However, there are only about 3,200 such families. Other exceptions were expected to be made from time to time for persons "valuable to the state in their present capacity." Such persons may rate the title of "honorary Aryans" such as exist in Germany.

The Council of Ministers signed, sealed and delivered the destinies of Jews in recent decrees. It barred the marriages of Italian citizens of Aryan race with a person belonging to another race, a provision which Pope Pius considered a violation of the Concordat between the Holy See and Italy.

Anyone who performs a marriage must satisfy himself independently that the prospective bride and bridegroom are not Jews, and if one of them is, to determine the other is not an Italian subject.

Jews no longer can act as guardians for Aryan minors. They cannot work for the national or any local government, are barred from the Fascist party. They cannot work for a bank of national importance or an insurance company. Two of Italy's largest insurance firms were formerly headed by Jews and employed many Jews. All these employees have been eliminated.

Following the German rule, Jews are not allowed to employ non-Jewish Italian servants. If a Jewish father tries to impose a Jewish education on his child who professes another religion he becomes subject to loss of his parental rights.

Since Jews are banned from attending Italian schools, provisions have been made for opening Jewish-taught secondary schools. A Jew who professes Catholicism may, however, attend an ecclesiastical school.

KIT CARSON—Avenger!
by EVELYN WELLS

CHAPTER XIV

Sutter would listen to Kit's tales with a strange look in his small eyes. He laid a stout, surprisingly small hand on the rough table.

"Paradises must be built, my friend. Perhaps I will build one, in your so-beautiful Sacramento valley. Ja!"

"Build it, Mr. Sutter. And I'll come see you in it," promised Kit.

The history of the West would be changed by this light chatter in the trading tent. The history of the world's wealth, and the entire story of gold, would be changed by Kit Carson urging a pioneer westward, into a California owned by Mexico.

For when Sutter left the rendezvous, he followed the California trail, and Kit Carson and history would hear again from him. He took with him the boy Juan, brought by Kit from Oregon. Sutter brought the lad for one hundred dollars, and like his new master, Juan would become a pioneer in the Sacramento valley.

But this was long before the discovery of gold, and fur was what gold would be. After the division of fur between the Bridger men, Kit carried his own share of the thick beaver pelt into the largest trading tent.

Beside the flapping doorway stood a barrel bearing a sign, "Whiskey by the glass." Kit passed it by. He had dared too much for his precious pelts to risk the usual opening drink between trapper and trader. The fox-faced man from St. Louis presiding over the precious goods, brought a thousand miles over dangerous trails, could more than out-match Kit in bargaining.

The trader was arguing now with an Indian girl. Beside them, with his elbow resting on the rough counter, lounged the bulky Shunan, enjoying the scene. Many Indians came into the rendezvous under the white flag to trade jewelry, pelts, horses and blankets for bright cloth and flour and fire-water.

The girl was bartering helplessly in broken Spanish, Shunan, amused, was acting as translator.

"I came to your camp under the white flag. I am chief's daughter." Kit saw Shunan's crooked eyebrows lift in a malicious grin. The Missouri trader answered the girl ruthlessly.

"Chief's daughter or not, no red-skin can expect white man's profit in a trade. I bring this flour a thousand miles by mule pack. What if your people are hungry? We can't feed all the Indians in the West!"

Shunan interrupted with ugly meaning: "I would... if they was pretty."

Stung, humiliated, the girl turned. And Kit saw it was Pine Needle.

Barbaric and beautiful she seemed, her arms and throat burdened with silver and turquoise jewelry fashioned by Navajo hands. Into his brain the scene burned slowly, of the girl standing in the dark tent, of the bear oil lamp burning overhead and the tent flap beating in the wind.

Wordless, Kit faced her. He had thought her dead, and yet he knew now he had always known she was living. Pale she looked, and mournful, but far lovelier than even he remembered. Her eyes burned with that same unforgettable, incomprehensible blue. A proud picture this, of a great chief's daughter brought to hawking the jewelry her father had bought for many ponies from peaceful Indians!

But it was plain, when she saw him, she hated Kit as deeply as ever!

Even when he spoke, interrupting the bulky Shunan, her glance defied him.

"Why, those are right purty bracelets, ma'am," drawled Kit. "I know the wuth of them if these fellows don't. I'd say, now, offhand, they was with a sack of good oat flour and a pile of pemmican and some dress goods and a smart hoss thrown in, to carry them all!"

The Missouri trader hastily agreed. He knew Kit Carson! But he knew by reputation, too, the bulky Shunan who was scowling now at Kit over the bent head of Pine Needle.

Shunan was silent after Pine Needle had slipped away with her treasures. She did not even glance at Kit.

Then Kit turned to Shunan and the two trappers measured one another.

There was a nervous excitement in the Green River rendezvous. After the trading was over, after the missionaries were gone, all restraint was forgotten. The trappers and traders argued over monte and furo. The whiskey barrels were being drained to their fiery depths. And there was the feeling of a grisly hand hovering over this warm, grassy place studded with buffalo-hide lodges.

Jim Bridger sounded the keynote of anxiety. His "tall tales" were taller than ever, but even they died unasily on his lips.

"An' I seed that ol' beaver, plain as I see you now, Mr. Cotton. Stick in his mouth, a' springin' my beaver traps. When he seed me comin' he skotched, and if ever I seen a grin on a beaver's face..."

The traders from St. Louis scoffed at Bridger's tales, and at all the talk of trapping, of the relative tastiness of bear tail over beaver tail, of the proper way to dry pemmican and stretch pelts, of "big catches" from Canada to California. They smiled, but then their glances followed the trappers to Kit Carson, sitting by his own fire, drawing a sliver of buckskin through a hole in his worn coffee pot.

Innocent enough, Kit seemed.

His wide hat was pushed back over eyes boyishly blue. His beardless face seemed guileless as a boy's. But eyes of western men are trouble-trained, and they saw that close to Kit's hand lay his new Hawkins rifle, with its brass studs, removed from his older gun. Each stud, all men knew, meant a man dead.

And over by the whiskey barrel tent swaggered Shunan.

"Injun women!" the Bully of the Mountains was proclaiming to a circle of uneasy listeners. "Good for cleaning a tepee and cooking grub and patching buckskin. They're useful animals, and I'm going to get me a squaw!"

Those watching saw Kit's expression did not change. They did not note that his blue eyes seemed suddenly gray as granite.

An old trapper warned Shunan.

"Don't let Kit get the draw on you. If he does, you're gone."

Shunan snorted.

"I am the best shot in the Rockies!"

That afternoon Kit rode to the Indian encampment on the river. With a troubled pity he sighted the few tattered spears of the remnant of this once great band of Arapaho, of the Blackfoot nation. The pride he had felt in punishing the Blackfeet died in Kit. He had beaten them to this level—her people!

A few braves sat listlessly as squaws about the fires. They sat with drooping heads like men defeated. The smallpox had completed the work of devastation. Kit Carson had begun.

Remembering the barbaric cruelty of that recent morning on the plains when from behind his barcade Kit had watched one thousand magnificent Blackfoot warriors creeping around him, Kit sighed voluntarily. Then he stared. She was walking toward the river, carrying a great painted water jug, not on her head as did the women of the Pecos, but gracefully, upon one shoulder, like the women of other ancient civilizations.

When she returned Kit was seated among the dozen braves, moving their peace pipe.

Her eyes widened, seeing him. Then softened. Between her aiming braids of hair they flashed, a mysterious, unfathomable blue. The wonder, the mystery of this girl, struck Kit like an arrow in the heart.

How she had defied him, lashed back like a wildcat in defense of the Blackfeet! Now she was all gentleness.

Kit spoke huskily, "Your people are troubled, Pine Needle."

She stood behind him demurely, as women should. She looked down on Kit's broad shoulder that she knew must at times still wince from the arrow she had drawn from it. She said without bitterness: "It is that Shunan."

"He's a pesterin' you?"

"He is often here."

Kit passed, the calumet to the brave on his right. Smoke puzzled from his lips.

"I am here under the white flag. There will be no trouble with Captain Shunan."

Then each troubled brave spoke in turn. All speech was of Shunan. The "Bully of the Mountains" visited their village to make trouble. He had even threatened with death those left of the tribe.

"War hatchet is buried," was Kit's answer. "Blackfeet and white men are at peace."

The soft gratitude of the girl's farewell warmed Kit. Carson like a pine knot fire on a stormy night. All his life he would treasure in secret the memory of her standing like a golden flower in the poor village, listening while Kit swore the sacred Blackfeet oath, surrounded by braves, holding in one hand a burning brand, in the other a painful of dust.

"By our father the sun, our mother the earth, our sister the fire—I swear Pine Needle, daughter of Red Bear, shall not be harmed by Shunan."

Religion was a matter of deep reverence to Kit. In this lonely country, far from cities, far from churches, how natural to worship the sun! In faces, in the little adobe church, he would kneel in prayer as earnestly as he now took the ancient oath of Blackfeet ritual.

By turning to the rendezvous he met Shunan, riding out.

Their horses whinnied and touched noses. Kit sat easily, his glance level.

"You're leaving, Shunan?"

"Leaving tomorrow, if it's any of your business. And not alone. I'm taking a squaw on the trail."

His meaning was unmistakable. Kit's glance grew narrower and more like stone.

"You don't leave this camp without taking oath not to touch Pine Needle."

Every man in camp seemed to have been waiting for the low-spoken words. From the tepees and camp fires men rose like magic. The two men on horseback were suddenly surrounded by a hundred buckskinned traders and trappers.

The two company captains said nothing. But their tanned faces were tense with anxiety for Carson. The men of the mountains were like brothers, and Shunan was a noted killer.

Shunan answered.

"Then make your choice, Carson. Bulls' ets or big des?"

"Whatever you carry now. We'll fight from here—on our horses."

Now Bridger dared protest.

"Kit, that ain't fair. Shunan has his rifle and all you have is that short dragon."

Across theommel of Shunan's saddle a rifle glittered, its long barrel an additional advantage. While Kit had slung on his belt only a short single-barreled dragon pistol.

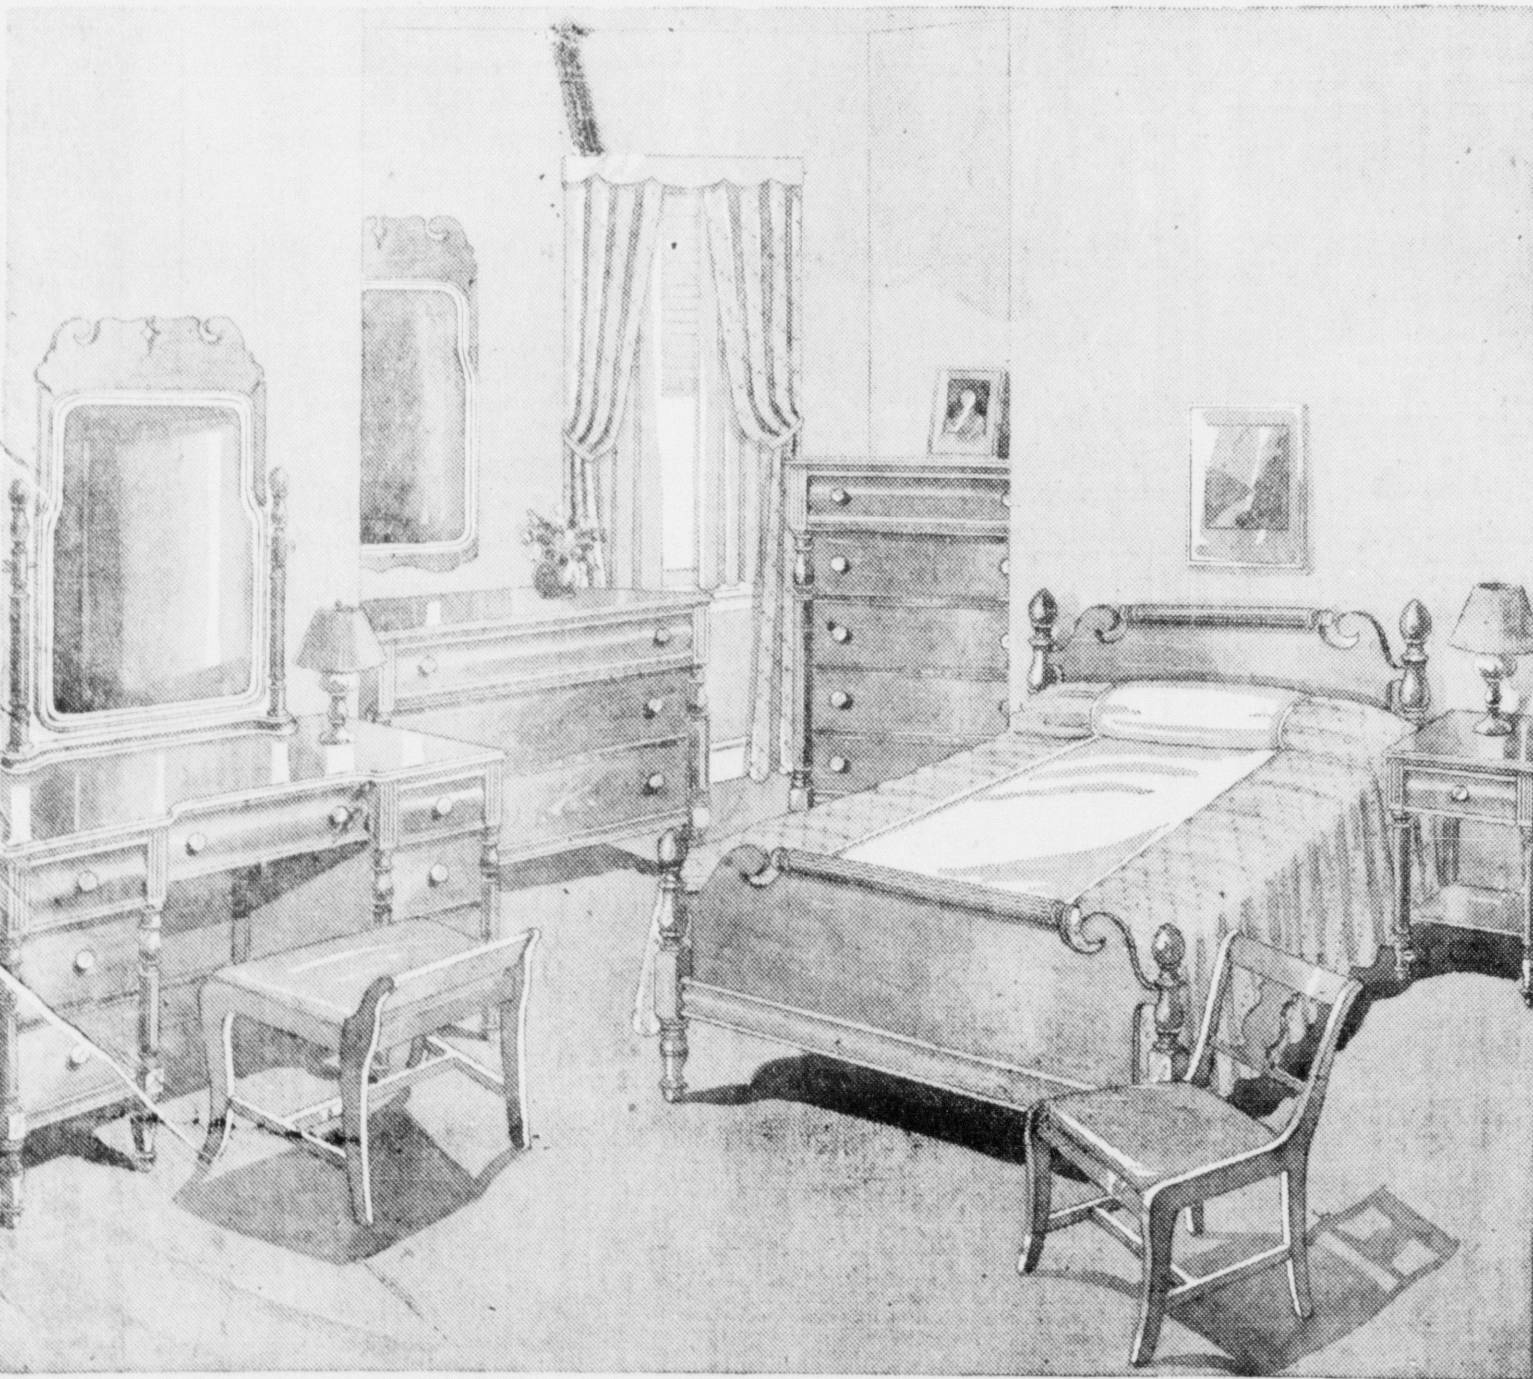

But without a word the men backed their horses apart. The others pressed back into two divisions, one on each side of the duellists, leaving a lane between. Some muttered words like prayers, "Steady hand, Kit. Good luck!"

LOOKING FORWARD

By Franklyn Waltman

Publicity Director, Republican National Committee

Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins inaugurated a new technique of self-defense and self-justification when he appeared before a Senate Committee in connection with his nomination to the Cabinet. This technique was to disavow and deplore that part of his record as W. P. A. Administrator which made his promotion to the Cabinet obnoxious to so many people.

Mr. Hopkins did not originate this technique. The Japanese for some years now have practiced it in international affairs. They sink an American warship or bomb a defenseless town and when upbraided for their action humbly assert: "Excuse, please." It is a part of the ancient trick based on the adage that "the hand is quicker than the eye."

When members of the Senate pointed out to Mr. Hopkins that nauseating political odors were coming out of the W. P. A., Mr. Hopkins allowed there was something to that. If he had certain things to do over again, he said, he would not do them. Thus he glossed over the fact that at the time these things were done he defended them and primarily was responsible for them. Mr. Hopkins got away with it.

Now comes Thomas R. Amle, of Wisconsin, before a Senate Committee to justify himself for appointment to the important Interstate Commerce Commission. Mr. Amle has been too radical even for the LaFollettes of Wisconsin. Certainly he is too radical for the Democrats of Wisconsin. When the latter struck out at Mr. Amle's appointment it appeared he might not be confirmed by the Senate.

So Mr. Amle took a leaf out of the Hopkins book of experience. He decided to disavow anything in his past life which might discredit him. The Wisconsin legislature by formal resolution charged Mr. Amle had "aligned himself with the Communist movement in this country."

"I want to state that I am not a Communist, and have never been a Communist," Mr. Amle told the Senate Committee. "On the contrary, I have strongly opposed the Communist aims and program."

Before this writer is a copy of the Communist - supported periodical "Soviet Russia Today." On page 17 appears this heading: "Call to a National Convention of the Friends of the Soviet Union." Under that heading is a lengthy statement explaining why "workers, farmers, intellectuals, professionals" should support the program of the Communist regime in Russia, concluding with a call to "help make this first National Convention a mass Congress for the defense of the U. S. S. R."

Among those listed as endorsing this statement are Thomas R. Amle; Earl Browder, leader of the Communist Party in this country; James W. Ford, the Negro Communist; William Z. Foster, the notorious Communist agitator, and a number of other American radicals and pseudo-radicals.

Was Mr. Amle "strongly opposed" to the Communist aims and program when he signed this statement? Does one oppose "the Communist aims and program" by consorting in friendly fashion with the avowed leaders of Communism in this country and by publicly expressing sympathy for their objectives? Of course, Mr. Amle's statement to the Senate Committee was tommyrot. Irrespective of what he says now, he stands as one of a small group of pseudo intellectuals who have done far more to advance the Communists and their program than Stalin's American followers have been able to do for themselves.

The case against Mr. Amle's appointment to the Interstate Commerce Commission, however, does not rest primarily on his flirtations with Communism and Communists. The point against him is that he has advocated the overthrow of the traditional American economic system. His writings and speeches indicate he is a sincere and ardent advocate of abolishing the profit system and turning the ownership of all means of production, including the railroads, over to the Federal government.

Again resorting to the Hopkins technique, Mr. Amle by inference denies he has advocated anything of the sort. He undertakes to distinguish between "a hypothetical description Convention, reprinted in the radical periodical, "Common Sense." Mr. Amle declared: "This brings me to the main point of my analysis: under the course that we must follow capitalism cannot be saved." Is that "hypothetical description?" It appears to us to be an expression of personal opinion from a man convinced that capitalism, which is the present American economic system, should not be saved. At all events, Mr. Amle in the next breath said this: "whether capitalism could be kept going for another period of years or not, it is not worth saving." Is that "hypothetical description?"

Washington Snapshots

By James Preston

The Capital's unofficial side-line spectators are having their big "I-told-you-so" inning.

Weeks before Congress convened when word first began to leak that the strategists were going to wheel National defense into the legislative spotlight, these observers began making predictions on just why and what the defense program would embrace. It would include, they speculated, just about every pet project that could be pictured as a defense requirement.

First to be dropped gently into the classification was part of WPA. Other lesser lights have followed. Now, however, the side-liners say they have detected the master stroke. In wit: revival of two of the largest spending projects ever started, but which were dropped after a flurry of protests, charges and Congressional revolt.

One of the projects is the Florida ship canal, which would cost about $200,000,000. The other is an experiment to develop power from the flow of the idea in Chesapeake Bay, Maine. This project called for an original expenditure of about $37,000,000. About $7,000,000 was spent on each project before they were dropped. Congress scolded the death knell by after engineers had called the Passaic, refusing to appropriate further funds for Chesapeake Bay power and the Florida project impractical.

They are revived now as part of the national defense program and there is anything but enthusiasm in Army and Navy circles. The military services would rather see the money spent on necessities.

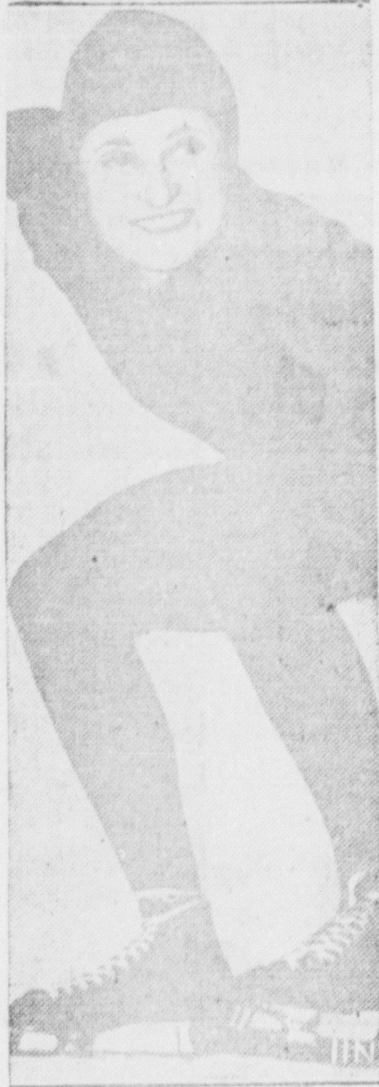

Another power project, this one already completed, is in a delicate situation. Incidentally, it is TVA, which is finding it difficult to satisfy the Comptroller General on a little matter of strawberries and cream. The Comptroller says he hasn't been able to get an intelligent answer as to why it was necessary to spend some six million dollars on strawberry patches, a freezing plant, a strawberry marketing boat, a dairy herd and other incidents on the TVA project.

While this tussle goes on, a three-sided scrap is on in another part of the Capital City. Participants are the Treasury and Justice Departments and the Intelligence Corps of the Army and Navy. The bone of contention is the business of rounding up spies.

The Department of Justice and the Treasury Secret Service branch are at odds over which should conduct spy trials and thus get the public's nod of approval and all the glory that goes with it. Jealousy has existed ever since the Department of Justice began publicizing its activities. In contrast to the silence of Treasury Secret Service agents.

On the other hand, the Intelligence Corps operatives would like to see all the fanfare of publicity that has marked recent spy trials stopped. It believes publicity hinders their work of trailing down spies. They contend the spies recently tried were "small fry" and that the publicity has caused the "big shots" to go into hiding until the "heat is off."

The city fathers in the National Capital (the District of Columbia Commissioners) are learning a lesson that the rest of the nation already knows. They say they would be a lot happier these days if they just had a good big industry in Washington—an industry, that is, other than politics.

Industrial plants have been discouraged—by law—from the District. In the first place industries could not meet stringent zoning limitations. In the second place, the smoke of industrial furnaces would dirty the white marble of government buildings.

Now, however, the District Commissioners are struggling with a budget problem. Adding to the troubles are their very limited tax sources. (Government salaries are not taxable, the government owns a large portion of the land in the District and the other property owners are already carrying a tax burden.) So, said the Commissioners last week, as they adopted a sales tax plan: "If we just had a good big industry here, giving jobs to a lot of people whose salaries were not exempt from taxes, we wouldn't have to work out a sales tax plan."

KNOW YOUR STATE

Tuberculosis in Pennsylvania
(Prepared for The Courier by F. A. Finken, Executive Director, Pennsylvania State Planning Board)

Tuberculosis still kills more of us between 15 and 45 than does any other disease. Its control becomes, therefore, a very necessary part of any planning program for Pennsylvania. Tuberculosis is definitely related to density of population. The higher the density in a county, the higher the death rate tends to be, and the greater the precautions that must be taken to fight this disease. The need for more recreation and more attractive and accessible areas in which outdoor life can be enjoyed must therefore be recognized. Such a program cannot hope to replace the efforts of public health or medical authorities, but it can go far toward making such efforts successful in the war on this disease.

The evidence for Pennsylvania is that our most congested counties are making such a fight—that the combination of more outdoor life and of the preventive efforts of medical science is winning. But because it is winning, our gains must be extended. For the health of us all, the congested parts of our population must be given increased access to outdoor pleasures. Perhaps this may seem to be reading into statistics more than they can show. Yet these are legitimate deductions.

As 1, the counties of lower density, where tuberculosis as a contagious disease might naturally be expected to be at a minimum, we find a very real irregularity in the record. This irregularity is not so great as to disguise the main fact as to the basic correspondence between prevalence of tuberculosis and population density. It is, however, serious enough to lead to the conclusion that as population density goes down below a certain "optimum" point, the advantage of comparative freedom from the dangers of contagion begins to be offset by the handicap of low income, or disadvantaged living, by which is meant living under conditions that lead to self-neglect through ignorance or isolation. There is good evidence for this conclusion also. Such counties have a problem caused by excessive scattering of population—excessive, that is, for the enjoyment of the advantages of modern life as to education and self-care. Better communication is a solution, but not a complete one; it is useless for those struggling on sub-marginal lands and handicapped by meager educational opportunity.

Nothing has been said so far about climate. The evidence that climate is a factor in tuberculosis mortality is superficially impressive. But analysis leads to the conclusion that climate is a factor of importance only in those counties of sparse and scattered settlement where the inclination or ability for self-care is often at a minimum. Localization of tuberculosis is plainly to be seen, but whether causes so localized operate directly through climate, or indirectly through a climate effect on agriculture and occupation, or because of an accidental arrangement of the contours of our State, one could not presume to say on the evidence at hand.

In our State, the regions of higher mortality are strikingly coincident with the eastern and western climate belts of comparatively milder weather.

But so also is the concentration of population. This factor also may in part be an effect of climate. Twenty-four counties are above the median in density and above it also in tuberculosis mortality; 23 counties are below in density and also below in mortality.

This clearly indicates a correlation of density to tuberculosis, although not necessarily a causal relationship. But from the characteristics of the distributions it is possible to make the following deductions (which are subject to the qualification that the data cover only a period of five years):

1. Density of population is most closely associated with high tuberculosis death rates in the areas of highest density of population, but in such areas the effect is modified in a way consistent with the wealth, the level of education, and the concentration of medical and social agencies in such parts of our State.

2. At about the median of population density favorable influences predominate. In these counties the density is not high, education is not handicapped by extreme sparseness of population and social and medical agencies are effective and accessible.

3. In the lowest density counties where resources are necessarily limited and population more scattered, the advantage of low density is in part offset by a lack of awareness as to the need for precautionary measures or the discouragement of poor and remote settlers in regard to self care.

Flashes from Florida

St. Valentine's Day at St. Petersburg.

We rather like this combination—a sentimental day in a "Sunshine City." Yes, down here, too, you see red hearts and love valentines in the shop windows. This morning a few from way up north arrived in our mail. We still enjoy opening them and making hopeful guesses. And each year we remember our schooldays with that cardboard box which the teacher covered with red tissue and placed on her desk for valentines. We remember, too, saving the necessary pennies to buy just the right valentine for "him." (The hours we spent selecting it!) Once in a mad burst of economy we made one ourselves, but alas it became as sticky as the sentiment we printed so painstakingly upon it.

As our valentines we sent snapshots of some of those top-heavy politicians we enjoy watching. We printed beneath their pictures, "Can't we BILL you as our Valentine?" Our apologies to the politicians for the pun. But these long-billed birds fascinate us. We caught our first glimpse of them as we drove along the six-mile Gandy bridge across Old Tampa Bay. Since then we have spent hours watching them dive for fish. It's astonishingly easy to let hours slip by in such idle amusement here in this restful city. Of course there are all kinds of active sports for energetic young visitors, but we confess very frankly that Croquet is our favorite game. The satisfaction we get out of driving our opponent's ball far off its course! Up north, like our distinguished Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, we keep pretty quiet about our enthusiasm for this sport. It was only recently discovered that croquet, and on the court of a Republican, mind you, his predecessor, Henry L. Stimson, is our Secretary of State's favorite recreation.

Maybe it's the sunshine, maybe the air, or perhaps it's those ubiquitous green benches in the parks and even along the main streets, anyway there is a contagiously friendly atmosphere in this resort city. People having mutual interests and backgrounds have formed many societies and associations such as the Pennsylvania Society, etc. Through these it is comparatively easy for a visitor to find people from his own part of the country.

We decided to investigate the story which we heard long ago that a St. Petersburg newspaper, the Evening Independent, justified the city's slogan, "The Sunshine City," by giving the paper away free every day that the sun didn't shine. We were told that this is a fact and that the paper has never had to give away more than five papers a year.

This afternoon we went for a drive. Just north of the city we saw the beautiful buildings which comprise the United States Veterans Bureau. Then outside of Clearwater, we visited a peacock farm and enjoyed watching these ornamental birds with their gorgeous plumage. A showplace of Clearwater is the Japanese Garden where Japanese girls serve Japanese tea. The lovely landscape effects and gardens again make us wonder about the incongruity of a people who possess such a real appreciation of beauty and such hatred for their fellow men in China. We prefer to think that the Japanese generally do not all share the selfish motives of the ruling militarists. There, a few rule many. We can be thankful that in our country we select a few to help us rule ourselves.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS WIN LEAGUE TITLE IN LOWER BUCKS

Bristol Defeats Buckingham Girls by Score of 30 to 4

LINCK STAR OF GAME

Game Was Very Much One-
Sided, Ending With Score
30 to 4

"On to New York!" That was the pass word among the girls of Bristol High's court team through the campaign in league competition. The phrase was used to encourage the girls in their games to urge them on to victory and another league crown. For another title meant a promised trip to New York's World Fair. The score was 30 to 4.

But no longer is the phrase, "On to New York," necessary following last night's tilt with the Buckingham Doe girls up on Bristol's floor. For the local girls earned their trip to the World's Fair by taking over the Doe girls in a strictly one-sided ball game to realize their dreams. The final count in the contest was 30-4. Bristol was slow in starting toward their victory and it wasn't until Ethel Linck dropped a foul shot after three minutes of play that a point was chalked up on the scoreboard. The star Bristol High forward, who celebrated the occasion, by spilling nine double deckers in a "hot" pace to rack up 19 points in the tilt, amassed four more points on a pair of field goals to account for the entire five points Bristol scored in the first period.

The win enabled Bristol to capture the Lower Bucks County girls' court league championship for the second consecutive year. They now have six victories and no defeats with two games to play. Their nearest rivals, Bensalem, has a record of 4 and 3 with one game to play, placing them 2½ games behind Bristol.

TONIGHT'S GAMES TO TELL THE TALE FOR TWO TEAMS

Tonight will spell the doom of either the Falls Alumni five or the Goodwill Hose team as far as second half hopes are concerned. The two teams meet in the second game scheduled on the Italian Mutual Aid floor. In the first tilt, Manhattan will play the Grundy five.

Goodwill and Falls have both lost a game in the second half chase and a defeat will eliminate either from the race as the league-leading Rohm and Haas quintet has won five straight and has Falls and Grundy to play before the close of the half.

Goodwill was one of the clubs that was a runner-up in the first half which ended in a triple deadlock with St. Ann's finally winning out. The firefighters stand an even chance of beating the Alumni boys and should this happen DeRisi's boys take over Rohm and Haas, Monday night, another deadlock will take place. Manager Eddie Lavenburg of the hosemen announced last night that his starting line-up will be composed of Gillard, Tulio, Lukens, Hughes and Profy. DeRisi's team which has won three straight will have: Briegler, Duerr, Lovett, Cappiello and Roberts. The Grundy team is still after its first win of the second half and feel confident that it will come tonight against the Manhattan team which has not lived up to its standard of playing in the second half.

First game is scheduled to start at eight o'clock.

SECOND-HALF RALLY NETS BRISTOL VICTORY

One of the smallest crowds of the season to witness a court game on the local floor saw one of the season's outstanding tilts when Bristol High tangled with the Buckingham Buccaneers here last night in a Lower Bucks County League scrap. For in that contest double deckers rained all over the place and when the smoke from the heat of the battle had cleared away, it was once again Bristol on top in a high scoring tilt, 52-30.
